

3D Print Contest Content

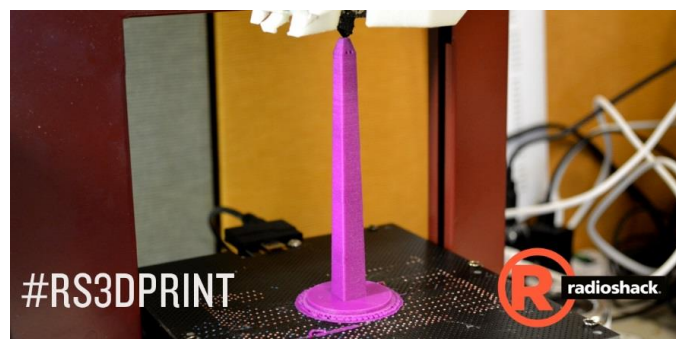

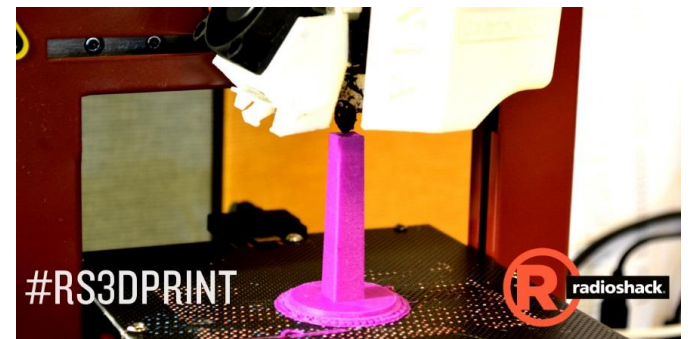

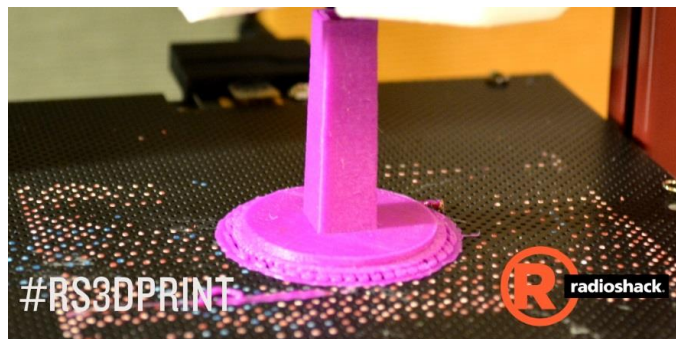

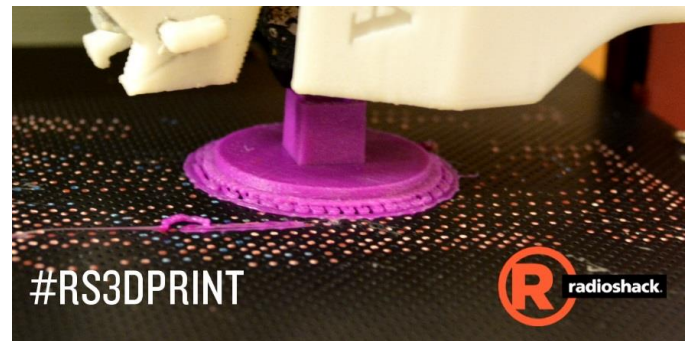

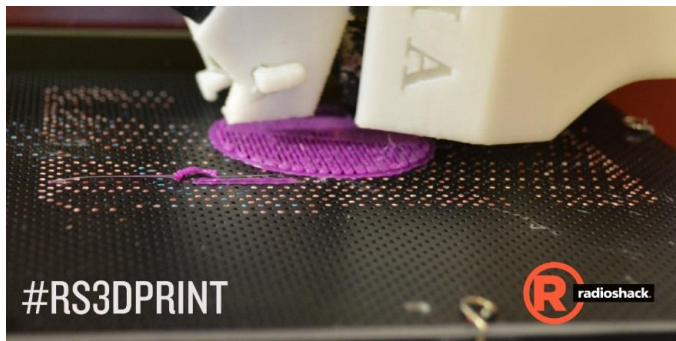

Dawn S.

Below are the final images used for a weekly (and sometimes semi-weekly) contest. The photos were taken during the process of the 3D printer producing the object, then they were released in order every few hours via the main RadioShack Twitter account. The purpose was for people to tweet what they thought the final object would be, and the winner was selected at random from the correct answers at the end of the contest. Prizes included something fun, like a Kodak PixPro camera, and then also the object itself. This contest ran in August and September of 2014.

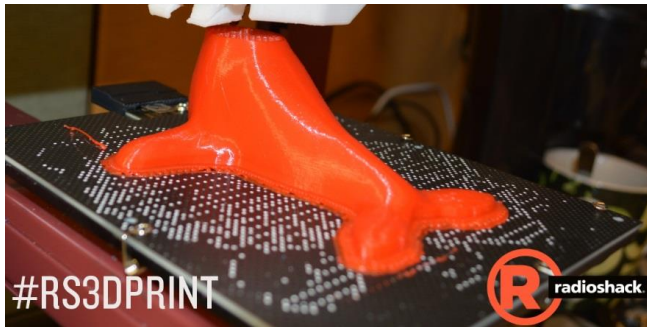

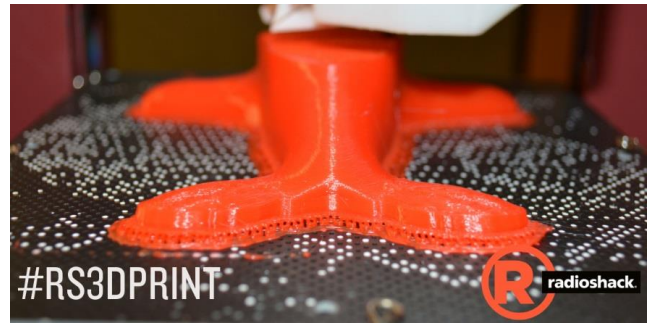

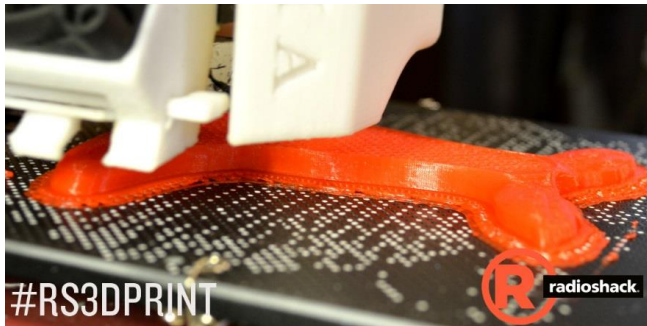

#RS3DPrint: Shark (in honor of the San Francisco POC store opening)

#RS3DPrint: Washington Monument (in honor of the Wash-DC POC store opening)

#RS3DPrint: Seal (in honor of the San Francisco POC store opening)

#RS3DPrint: The White House (in honor of the Wash-DC POC store opening)

